

Ann Hicks

Ann Hicks is a licensed clinical psychotherapist with post-masters certifications in Advanced Clinical Practice and Clinical Supervision from NYU School of Social Work. She has worked in community mental health settings as well as in private practice. Ann has also had a life-long interest in the dance. From 2011 through 2017 she was on the American Ballet Theatre Trustee Board and was the Chair of the Education Committee. During that time she created a Wellness Program which included an Eating Disorder Prevention Screening program for the pre-professional division in their school. In addition to counseling young dancers, she ran workshops for parents, students, and staff.

Ann was also on the Board of Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival and founded their Choreography Fellows Program in 2017. This program focuses on training young choreographers and guiding them in the early part of their career. Finally, Ann served on the Board of Planned Parenthood of Greater New York, and is a major supporter of The Brotherhood Sister Sol, a Harlem-based youth support organization. In addition to giving to their capital campaign, she has underwritten the expansion of their Wellness Center over the past 3 years.

Ann received both her MSW and MBA from NYU and started her career in advertising and consumer product marketing at Clorox and Ogilvy & Mather before embarking on her second career in social work.

Currently, Ann is the Chair of the Board of the Jacob Burns Film Center and was previously the Chair of their Education Committee. She lives in NYC with her husband Weston.
